PIGEON PHOTOGRAPHS.

German Apothecary Trains the Birds to Take Pictures.

Dr. Neubronner, court apothecary to Kaiser William of Germany, has been experimenting for years with carrier pigeons, putting these birds to many uses not intended by nature.

His latest invention, which the patent office in Berlin has protected, is a small, queerly constructed camera which he fastens on the breast of a pigeon and which is so arranged that photographs may be obtained while the bird is in flight.

The structure of the camera and the method of fastening it are his secret, and so is the delicate arrangement employed for opening and shutting the lenses for time exposures, says a Berlin correspondent of the New York World. The inventor claims for his apparatus a great future, especially as it will be an invaluable aid to the soldier in time of war.

Neubronner says he can get a picture of the interior of a fortress in this way, and the military authorities in Berlin are going to let him experiment on the fortress of Spandau, outside Berlin. Several birdseye views he has obtained of interiors of dismantled forts have been shown to the authorities, who are said to be surprised at the results. The pictures are in no sense perfect, but they give complete indications of all important positions.

Neubronner claims that his pigeon photographs will be as useful to the general in the field as the balloon. The prospect of success to failures he estimates at three to seven.
